SB&D MAGAZINE is the only media property that covers economic development in the American South, the world’s third-largest economy. Its following over more than 25 years is legendary, as many readers tell us each quarter that they read the magazine “cover to cover.” SB&D has been quoted by CNN, Time, AP, ABC News, Fox News, CNBC, MSNBC, PBS, The Huffington Post, Yahoo, Al Jazeera, the BBC and dozens of other electronic media and in publications such as The Wall Street Journal, USA Today and The New York Times.

SB-D.COM is Southern Business & Development’s longest-running web site — live since 1998 — and has been completely redesigned for mobile use. Thousands of archived pages and a strong readership throughout the world make SB-D.com one of our advertisers’ favorite buys.

For the thousands that have registered for its free daily email blast, RandleReport.com is the first news report they look at each morning on their mobile devices. RandleReport.com aggregates and posts every significant economic development, business and political story that breaks each hour of the day in the South in real time. Editors are required to post one new story every five minutes 9:00 to 5:00 CDT, Monday through Friday, meaning about 100 stories are posted daily. Stories are chosen by live editors in two shifts and over 180,000 stories from the South have been aggregated and archived in its first seven years. Visitors to The Randle Report averaged over 12 pages and 13 minutes per session in 2017.

SOUTHERNAUTOCORRIDOR.COM focuses on the South’s largest industry sector and that’s the region’s automotive industry. With 21 major automotive assembly plants, the South’s auto sector is second only to the Midwest’s in North America.

Readership/Audience
SB&D continues to target c-suite executive readers in key markets and states located outside the American South. In addition, c-suite executives of companies located in major Southern markets are occasionally targeted when editorial content is appropriate. States where readership is emphasized with each edition include Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, and Pennsylvania in the Northeast, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin in the Midwest and California and Washington on the Pacific coast. Depending on industry targets, execs located in other U.S. states may or may not receive SB&D in any given quarterly issue. Approximately 900 site consultants and/or SIOR members doing business in the U.S. receive each edition as well.

Paid Subscriber Base
In 2005, Southern Business & Development initiated an aggressive paid subscriber campaign. We have been told that SB&D is one of the top two “reads” in economic development publishing today. Our paid subscriber campaign will continue in 2019 and beyond. In September of 2018, SB&D had over 1,700 paid subscribers.

Qualified Non-Requested Base
Qualified non-requested readership in 2018 made up slightly less than half of SB&D’s readership base. Each issue of SB&D has a specific industry and editorial theme; therefore different non-requested readers are targeted with each edition. However, certain industry execs are targeted with each edition. Selected execs in the automotive, aerospace, plastics, headquarter, distribution and food products industries receive SB&D each quarter.

Our journalists cover more than 200 different Southern markets each year.

SB&D is a trusted source of information not available from any other source. We know because we see the South from 30,000 feet. Our journalists also see economic development in the South at ground level. We have visited over 2,000 different cities and counties in the South since 1992.

In an age when conducting interviews over the phone or by email is the preferred cost-cutting method for most news outlets, SB&D travels the South experiencing the story in person. That strategy has worked for us for more than 25 years and it has made editor and publisher Mike Randle a well-known, noted expert on the American South’s economy.
